CATCH CHICKEN
THIEVES IN CITY
Two Sponseller Men, Wanted for Theft here, are Caught in Baltimore through Information Given by Detective Wilson.

Charles Sponseller and Eli Sponseller, two slippery individuals who have made several sensational get-aways from Sheriff Thompson, Detective Wilson and other local officers, were caught in Baltimore on Monday by police of that city in the third story of a building at 500 Pine Street. Mr. Wilson had furnished the police of that city with a description of the men and an arrest was effected when they were seen to return from an expedition carrying a bag containing eight dead chickens and a basket with four live ones.

With the men were taken the wife and father-in-law of one of them. All lived in one room in the Pine Street building.

The Sponsellers have been wanted here since October 4 last when they are alleged to have taken from Edward A. Scott, in Freedom township, a set of single harness, a set of double harness, one blanket and some chickens. Several times the Gettysburg officers have visited the place by night but the men were always too quick, and either were not present when the officers reached the scene or departed so rapidly that there was no chance of capture.

The last effort to effect their arrest was made on the morning of Friday January 30, and it was at this time that the Dart boy and John Sponseller Jr. were taken from the home of Miss Forney not very far distant.

Mr. Wilson suspected that the two men might make tracks for Baltimore and he accordingly communicated with authorities in that city. The arrest was made early Monday morning and Mr. Wilson went to Baltimore, during the day, to identify the two prisoners. The wife and father-in-law are being held as witnesses.

The charge of larceny of chickens will be heard in Maryland after which the men likely will be turned over to Detective Wilson should they be acquitted of the charge preferred in Baltimore.

THIRTEEN MORE
MAKE DECISIONS
Monday Evening's Service in St. James Church, of an Informal Nature, Brings Gratifying Results. Short Talks.

Taking on more of an informal character than the meetings of the past ten days, the service in St. James Lutheran church Monday night proved to be the most interesting and most profitable of the entire series. There was no hesitation when decisions were asked, and thirteen were quick to rise, bringing the total to ninety eight.

Personal testimony was given by several persons, the most remarkable being that of George Weikert who told of reaching a decision last Tuesday and having stood up that same evening. Since then he has brought one new convert each evening, six young men gained by his personal work, standing on as many different nights. Mr. Weikert's five minute talk was followed with the rapt attention of the audience.

Others who spoke during the evening were Sherwin C. Martin, who recently moved to Gettysburg, to become foreman of the finishing department at the Reaser plant; Miss Maud Miller, C. S. Reaser, E. P. Miller, Robert White and Rev. J. B. Baker. No sermon was preached and the service partook more of the nature of an experience meeting.

After several of the speeches were heard the choir started to sing softly "Almost Persuaded", and decisions were called for. Of the thirteen who arose during the period twelve were entirely new decisions while one was a case of reconsecration. The people were jubilant over the success of the evening's service which came as the result of a large amount of personal work. Mr. Baker again emphasized the great factor that this outside work had been in the services of the week, the decisions coming in the majority of instances as the result of personal interviews rather than by emotion kindled by the impressive church service.

This evening Rev. Joseph B. Baker will preach the sermon. It is expected that Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Miller, who were called to their home to attend two funerals on Monday, will again be present with their daughter, Helen.

MOCK TRIAL
Biglerville Has Realistic Scene during Christian Endeavor Week.

The mock trial on Saturday evening in connection with Biglerville's Christian Endeavor week was well rendered to a small audience. The earnestness of the attorneys, W. E. Kapp and E. Dale Heiges, gave it a real court trial aspect. A collection of $9.51 was taken. On Sunday evening "The Importance of Signing the Pledge" was discussed after which the pastor, Rev. C. F. Floto, preached a very forceful and impressive decision sermon.

COUNTY ROADS
DRIFTED SHUT
Rural Mail Carriers Face an Impossible Task when they Start to Cover their Routes. Railroads Give Good Service.

The hardest worked man these days is the rural mail carrier who is just now up against the proposition of either conquering snow banks from three to five feet in depth or else returning with his route but partly covered.

On Monday not one carrier from the Gettysburg office covered his full route. Some of them got to scarcely half of their patrons and many had to do without their mail. Such a thing as getting through the roads at certain places was entirely out of the question and, no matter how faithful the servant of Uncle Sam might be, he could not get over the twenty four or more miles assigned to him. George Grove, carrier on route four, was the one nearest to perfection, and he failed to serve five of his people.

To-day the roads were reported in even worse condition than Monday, the larger portion of the drifting occurring late Monday afternoon and again Adams County people had to do without their much desired mail. Some made only small parts of their routes and many were held up a comparatively short distance out of town.

The railroads coping well with the snow. Ploughs were kept busy on the Reading, and the Western Maryland had their trains on time. The big Caledonia bus braved the elements and made a round trip, leaving here at seven o'clock Monday morning and reaching its destination after eleven. The return was made, leaving the mountain at three in the afternoon and arriving at 6:30. Shovels had to be used to open the road at several places.

In town there were some big drifts, Steinwehr avenue and South Washington street being the most seriously drifted for fifteen years.

BOARD IS CLEARED
Hospital Managers at York are Found Blameless.

The management of the York Hospital was exonerated from all blame by the committee of York citizens appointed to investigate charges that the institution was in an unsanitary condition, that the superintendent was unable to enforce the rules, that patients were neglected and that there was an excessive mortality rate among infants in the maternity ward.

Five physicians and twelve nurses testified for the complainants and thirty three doctors for the defendants. Four patients testified to inattention. Factional differences in the staff are said to have caused the charges of irregularities.

It recommended that disloyal physicians be removed. One hundred witnesses were heard and the testimony covers 700 typewritten pages.

GAVE GOOD CONCERT
College Boys Make Fine Impression on Baltimore Audience.

This morning's Baltimore American said: "The Mandolin and Glee Clubs of Pennsylvania College, Gettysburg, gave a most entertaining concert at Albaugh's Theatre last night. The mandolin numbers were played with much spirit, and the glees were sung as only college boys can sing them."

"This concert was under the auspices of the Baltimore Branch of the Woman's League of Pennsylvania College, and the object was to help raise funds to support a professorship of English Bible in the college."

"Candy was sold during the intermission by young ladies from the various Lutheran churches of the city. More than $700 will be realized altogether from the concert."

LICENSE COURT
IN CHAMBERSBURG
Fight all but Two of the Licenses in Franklin County. Allege Violations of the Law. Illegal Names on the Petitions.

The most interesting license court ever held in Chambersburg began on Monday and will last all week. Of the thirty six applicants for licenses for old stands, thirty four had charges filed against them, specifying improper certifiers, selling to minors or drunkards. Five leading attorneys, headed by A. J. W. Hutton and D. Edward Long, represented the remonstrants, and the remainder of the Franklin county bar, almost without exception, was retained by the applicants.

A schedule for the cases was made by Judge Gillan and Hotels Washington, Montgomery, National, McKinley and Wallace and Vanderaus cases were heard Monday. Other cases are set for later dates. The Women's Christian Temperance Union and ministers held a union prayer meeting on Sunday afternoon and on Monday met at a central church and marched across the square to the court room. The court was crowded to suffocation.

The Hotel Washington case came first. It was shown that two of the certifiers had not paid taxes in Chambersburg. Then ten minors swore to getting drinks. Three witnesses, who will be used in nearly every case, are boys of 17 to 19, High School pupils, who went from bar to bar all over the county and bought whisky in bottles. The attempt to discredit these boys was stopped by Judge Gillan.

APPLE ADVICE
Adams County Fruit Grower Asks for Information.

An Adams County man wrote to State Zoologist H. A. Surface, Harrisburg, stating that he had land that was derived from granite, and had a clay sub-soil with a stream of water flowing through the tract, and asked if this would be suitable for planting in an orchard.

To this inquiry Professor Surface replied as follows: "Much can be determined by observing the surrounding trees, and specially fruit trees planted on land of that kind. It should be remembered that the lower the land the more water collects there, and the more thrifty will the trees grow if the roots are not constantly too wet; but it should also be remembered that vigorous growth does not mean fruit production. In many cases it is better to have slower growth and a more regular and abundant setting of fruit than can be obtained on low land where frosts are liable to kill the fruit crops occasionally. As a rule loose or well drained land is best and it should be deep soil without a subsoil of hardpan or clay that holds water. Limestone land is all right for apple and pear, but I much prefer shale soil or sandy soil, or some other loose soil for peach."

"Granite land is all right for apple and peach if it is well drained. I must confess I do not like the idea of a clay subsoil, because this sounds like a wet soil. Much depends upon the drainage, but if this is good you are right. A stream through the land is no detriment if the ground is not too low. If it is a slow-running and sluggish stream through a valley that is not sloping much it means low land where there will be late frosts and unsatisfactory results from the settling of the cold air. It is best always to plant fruits on land elevated enough to give good air drainage."

ADELAIDE PHILLIPS
And An Old-Time Negro Melody

Early in 1840 a tiny English lass of seven years landed in America with her parents from Stratford-on-Avon, the historic birthplace of William Shakespeare. At the age of nine little Adelaide Phillips made her first appearance at the Tremont Theatre in Boston. Jenny Lind met her and advised her to go to London, and later she studied in Italy, where she won a great triumph as Arsace in "Semiramide". Returning to America she was given an ovation accorded few singers and continued her tour on to Cuba. When the Boston Ideal Opera Company was formed in 1875 she appeared in "Puritans" and the Sullivan operas, and added greatly to her fame as one of America's most popular and beloved contralto singers. It was a memory that can never be effaced to hear Adelaide Phillips sing the old popular songs as encore after encore was demanded. To hear her sing that plaintive melody of Foster's, "Massa's in de Cold, Cold Ground," vibrated the heart chords and touched the hearts of hearers. This song is to be found on page 350 of "Heart Songs", a veritable library of the greatest songs in the world, and now offered to the readers of this paper for six coupons and the cost of distribution. See Coupon with terms elsewhere in to-day's issue.

FRENCH LINER POUNDS ROCKS

Blizzard Drives Steamship Roma Ashore on Island.

WIRELESS CALLS FOR AID

Revenue Cutters Rushing to Assistance of Stranded Vessel With 518
Persons Aboard.

Woods Hole, Mass., Feb. 17. — The French transatlantic steamship Roma, carrying passengers and cargo from Spanish ports to New York, was reported by wireless ashore at No Man's Land, a small island ten miles south of Gay's Head, on Martha's Vineyard.

Late messages from the Roma said that she was pounding heavily. The blizzard increased in density, but continued from the northeast.

The Roma ran ashore on the north side of No Man's Land during a blizzard from the east northeast.

She was not considered to be in a particularly dangerous position so long as the gale kept out of the south.

Radio calls for assistance were sent out for the revenue cutters Acushnet, at New Bedford, and the Gresham, at Provincetown.

The Roma carried 418 passengers and a crew of 100 men, according to a message received by Captain Broadbent, of the revenue cutter service, at Boston, from James W. Elwell & Co., of New York, the agents of the vessel.

The vessel is owned by the Fabre
Steamship company.

Capt. Comberous reported by wireless that the Roma was shaking a little, but shipping no water. He did not consider her position dangerous at the time and said a change of wind would result in smoother water and the situation would be more favorable.

The Roma left Marseilles on Jan. 31 for Providence and New York. She was due in Providence on Tuesday.

The passengers include one of the first class for New York and two for Providence, three of the second class for New York and twenty for Providence, and twenty of the third class
for New York and 306 for Providence, together with 66 passengers of all classes who embarked at the Azore Islands, all bound for Providence.

LARRY EYRE TO RETIRE

Republican "Boss" of Chester County
to Quit Political Activity.

West Chester, Pa., Feb. 17. — T. Lawrence Eyre, for a number of years the Republican "boss" of Chester county,
reputed to be worth several million dollars, will retire from active political and business life in Chester county.

He issued an announcement that all his extensive properties in West Chester are on the market and will be sold to the highest bidder.

Mr. Eyre refused to discuss the reasons for the sale, stating simply that he desired to retire from public life.
He may erect a bungalow and continue his residence in West Chester, but would reveal none of his plans for the future.

The properties involved include
"Eyre View," the summer home on North Walnut street, West Chester;
the Deborah's Rocks farm, on both of which Mr. Eyre expended several hundred thousand dollars within a few years; the newspaper
plant of the Village Record, a residence at 610 South High street, and all the expensive stock of farming machinery, cattle and other things at both his places.

None of the intimate friends of Mr.
Eyre are willing to advance any reason for the sudden move on his part.
He is interested in the Eyre Construction company, Mexican mining propositions, some Chester county lands and a number of other business interests.

TO DEPORT ALIEN CONVICTS

Those Who Serve Jail Term at Wilkes-Barre to Be Sent Away.

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Feb. 17. — Any un-naturalized person who is arrested in this city and spends ten days or more in jail will be deported following his release.

This announcement was made by Chief of Police John Roberts, after a conference with Immigration Inspector Farrell, of New York, and Mayor
John V. Kosek.

The federal law permits the deportation of any unnaturalized person who has served ten days or more for Won't Put Houston on Board.

Washington, Feb. 17. — President Wilson is still working out the personnel of the federal reserve board and hopes to be able to announce the names of the members not later than the first of the next month. He said, however, that he does not intend to ton a member. The president does not wish to break up his present cabinet.

President Back at Desk.

Washington, Feb. 17. — President Wilson was back at his desk in the executive office, somewhat hoarse but apparently recovered from the cold which kept him in bed several days last week. The president told callers he was feeling much better and ready to attack the correspondence that has accumulated in his absence.

CONGRESS WILL ADJOURN JUNE 15

President Expects Action on Trust Legislation.

Washington, Feb. 17.—June 15 is the date on which the Democratic leaders
hope to adjourn congress.

President Wilson expects early action on the trust bills, and thinks the house and senate may well work on the matter the same time. He told callers that business men were showing a greater interest in the new legislation,
and that, in many cases, it was a helpful interest.

That interest is not so active as he had expected, and he attributes that to the fact that business men have discounted the character of the legislation and that the measures, in a general way, meet their approval.

The president, incidentally, remembered that many objections to the publicity features of the trade commission bill were based on a misconception of what the bureau of corporations already could do. The president sees in the difference in the proposed interstate trade commission and the present bureau of corporations, which, he believes, will be merely enlarged by the forthcoming legislation.

BIG RATE RAISE AGAIN HELD UP

Increase by Eastern Railroads Suspended Till Sept. 12.

SOUGHT AN EARLY RULING

This Action by Interstate Commerce Commission Indicates Decision Will Be Long Delayed.

Washington, Feb. 17.—The proposed general increase of five per cent in freight rates, sought by all the eastern railroads in the official classification district, were again suspended by the interstate commerce commission
until Sept. 12.

The commission previously had suspended the increase until March 15,
pending investigation as to their fairness. This action is taken as indicating that the hearings, now in progress, will require many months, and that the decision, which had been expected within a few weeks, will be long delayed.

The decision of this question had been looked forward to as having a great effect on general business.

The commission reviewed the formal hearings on the proposed advance.
Protests against any increase in the rates on glass were made by concerns
in Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Virginia, New York, Ohio and Indiana.

The plan of the fifty-two railroads
in the official classification territory, comprising all those operating east of the Mississippi river and north of the Ohio and the Potomac, for a general advance of five per cent in all class and commodity rates, was brought before the interstate commerce commission nearly a year ago. It was the revival of the effort, which had failed shortly before, to increase the incomes of the roads by freight rate increases, and was made imperative, according to the heads of the chief railways, by the great increase in the labor costs, due to the arbitration of demands by engineers, firemen and trainmen, and to many other causes of increased expenditures by the various lines.

The cause of the railroads was set forth by Samuel Rea, president of the Pennsylvania railroad; Daniel Williams,
president of the Baltimore & Ohio,
and other leading railway men of the country, who led in the movement and who sought thus to impress upon the public mind that the increase of rates was of vital importance to the railroads.

On May 13, of last year, formal briefs were filed with the interstate commerce commission, and on June 26, acting on its own initiative, the commission issued an order that an investigation into the need of the increase would be held. The decision to investigate was reached by a bare majority, three of the commissioners, Clements, McChord and Marble, dissenting.

An important incident of the hearings was the recent declaration of the commission that the main steam railroads must charge all industries controlling and operating small branch roads for the services performed. It was set forth that the "allowances" made to such roads, particularly those controlled by steel companies, were practically rebates and operated to the disadvantage of other industries.
These "allowances," it was declared, amounted to millions of dollars annually.

SCHMIDT CONFESSES AGAIN

Slayer of Anna Amuller Declares She Died as Result of Operation.

Albany, N. Y., Feb. 17.—The convicted slayer of Anna Amuller, Hans Schmidt, has made another complete confession of the crime.

He made a confession at the time of his arrest in New York, and on Monday he gave all the details of the tragedy to a representative of District Attorney Whitman at the Sing Sing penitentiary, where he occupies a cell in the death house.

This announcement was made by a state official. He said that Schmidt confessed that an illegal operation had been performed on Anna Amuller and that she died as a result.

Schmidt, it is said, declared he had no intention of killing her, but after she died he decided that her body would have to be disposed of, and he therefore dismembered it, dropping the several parts in the Hudson river.

Schmidt is now under sentence to die in the electric chair in the week beginning March 23.

MILITANTS FIRE HUGE GUN

Cannon Silent For Sixty Years Rocks
City With Heavy Charge.

Blackburn, Miss., Feb. 17.—Militant
sufragettes fired a huge cannon captured from the Russians in one of the battles of the Crimean war.

For sixty years the cannon had stood silent, as an ornament in the city park. The whole city was shaken by the explosion and people flocked into the streets fearing that a mine disaster had occurred in the neighborhood.

It was not until daylight that the cause of the explosion was discovered.
Then it was found that the sufrage-ttes had carefully cleaned from the bore of the gun over half a century's accumulation of gravel and stones before ramming home a heavy charge of gunpowder.

In the vicinity, attached to a tree,
floated a long strip of calico inscribed:
"Wake up, Blackburn. The labor party, which claims to stand for justice and freedom, supports a government that tortures women under the infamous 'cat and mouse' act."

CROWD IN CHURCH COWED WITH GUN

Congregation Leaps Through Window to Escape.

Federalburg, Md., Feb. 17. — All Saint's Holiness church, near here, was the scene of a reign of terror at the close of service on Sunday night,
when Michael Miller stationed himself at the main exit and threatened to shoot the congregation if they attempted to pass out.

The little church was crowded at the time and men, women and children jumped out of the windows and fled, many of them leaving their conveyances behind. In several instances mothers took infants in their arms and jumped from the windows to the ground. Several women fainted and had to be lifted bodily by their husbands, who managed to escape the half-crazed man.

Miller was finally subdued when J.
A. Nichols dealt him a blow on the head. He was captured by Elward McCoey and arraigned before Magistrate Weddell, of Harlock, who fined him $33.75.

$94,000,000 FOR THE ARMY

Appropriation Bill Bars Supplying Ponies For Polo Players.

Washington, Feb. 17.—The military appropriation bill, carrying approximately $94,000,000, which is only $27, 000 short of the amount for the current year, was introduced in the house
by Representative Hay, of Virginia,
chairman of the military affairs committee.

One clause declares that "no portion of this appropriation for horses shall be expended for polo ponies, except for West Point Military academy, and such ponies shall not be used in any other place." This puts an end to the exploiting of polo teams provided by the government.

CREW ABANDON POTOMAC

Men Land Safely, But Gale Drives
Naval Tug to Sea.

St. Johns, N. P., Feb. 17.—The United States naval tug Potomac, held fast in the ice floes of the Gulf of St. Lawrence, has been abandoned by the thirty-six officers and men of her crew, according to advices received from Bonnie Bay, where the crew landed in safety.

The tug was driven seaward before Sunday's heavy gale and soon disappeared from sight. The ice was piled so high about the vessel that it was feared she would be crushed under the pressure.

Find Trampy Has Smallpox.

Connellsville, Pa., Feb. 17.—Health authorities here learned that a tramp
who had been sleeping in an abandoned coke oven for more than a week was suffering from smallpox. He was hurried to the pest house, where he told attendants that while he occupied the oven no less than fifty tramps had called there.

Robbers Get $10,000 in Cash.

Milledgeville, Ga., Feb. 17. — Safe

after overcoming the night watchman of C. S. Bonner here. Bonner says the loot was his savings of a lifetime.

Comin' Thro' the Rye

The common idea of this song which pictures the two lovers coming through a field of rye is a popular error. The "Rye" in the song is a little river in Scotland and "To Meet a Body Comin' Thro' the Rye," meant to meet someone crossing the river on the stepping stone. Any lad meeting a lassie crossing on the stepping stones was privileged to exact a toll of kisses.

Investigations which have been made at a number of slaughter houses in the state of Wisconsin show that from 20 to 30 per cent of hogs examined showed infection to a greater or less extent with tuberculosis. This was found to be contracted chiefly through two sources—consuming milk from tubercular cattle and following feeding cattle that were afflicted with the disease.

An English poultry fancier of the name of William Cook, who recently delivered an address before the poultry and pigeon show in Madison Square Garden, New York city, asserted that by means of running a lights in his poultry houses during the winter months, so as to prolong the hours of daylight, he had caused his hens to lay more, while the chickens grew faster because they had more time in which to eat.

A lady reader of an eastern agricultural paper gives the following recipe for trying out leaf lard that saves a good deal of time; She first puts the lard through a meat grinder, using the coarse plate, fills the kettle nearly full, adds a little water, puts on cover and stirs occasionally. When done there will be no moisture on the underside of the cover. Pour all into cheesecloth in colander over a jar. The scraps will drain dry and will not need to be squeezed out.

Experiments that were conducted in Kansas last season by entomologists connected with the state agricultural college following the grasshopper outbreak indicate that in sections where poison bait was used systematically last summer three out of every four grasshoppers were put out of business by actual count. It has also been found that disking the alfalfa fields in the spring as soon as the frost is out serves to break up and exposes to the elements and bird life the egg clusters of the insects, while the yield of alfalfa has been increased one-third as a result of the loosening and mellowing of the soil.

Radium, an element but recently discovered, is at once the most precious, most powerful and scarcest metal known. In America, which furnishes most of the world's supply, the output is in the shape of 16.4 grams of hydrous radium bromide. This was extracted from thirty-eight tons of uranium oxide. Of the amount of radium produced 8.3 grams were shipped to Europe and 8.1 grams were used or kept at home. An interesting feature of radium, in which the greatest interest centers just now as a possible cure for cancer, is that it retains its healing powers in a most remarkable way and that a quantity used for healing purposes today will still be effective several generations hence.

Love's Power Limited.

Men think women's love to be lasting without any effort on their part to retain it. But a woman's love cannot live any longer on a starvation diet than that of a man.—Manchester Union.

WOMEN OF JAPAN.

The Old Time "Three Obediencies" No Longer Dominate Her.

From the beginning of Japanese history to the introduction of Chinese civilization women occupied a very high place in Japan and filled positions of importance and honor in state, religion and household. Several empresses at different times ruled the empire. The greatest lights in the world of pure Japanese literature are both women—Murasaki Shikibu and Sei Shonagon. Their superb productions, "Genji Monogatari" and "Makura no Soshi," are strong proofs of a large measure of liberty and of high position for women in the old Japan. The Confucian doctrine of the three obediencies: Obedience, while yet unmarried, to a father; obedience, while married, to a husband; obedience, while widowed, to a son, that changed the primitive state of comparative freedom and independence of woman. Buddhism and feudalism contributed also to place women in an inferior position and state of dependence.

Many Americans assume that women still occupy an inferior position in Japan under the law. But this is not true. During the last fifty years female education has spread throughout the country. Western jurisprudence has superseded Chinese and a great revolution has come over the social and legal position of woman. The new civil code of Japan created a new legal woman. It proceeds upon the principle of equality of the sexes and makes no distinction between men and women in their enjoyment and exercise of private rights so long as the woman remains single. She may now become the head of the house. She may exercise parental authority over her child. If her husband be dead she may adopt children, she may make contracts, acquire or dispose of property in her own name. In short, she may be a party to any legal transaction so long as she remains unmarried. When she is married her state of coverture obliges her to obtain the permission of her husband before doing certain acts, such as contracting debts, instituting legal proceedings, entering into contracts of personal service, etc. But even though she does these acts without her husband's permission, they are not void, but only voidable.—From a Bulletin of Japan Society of America.

EYES OF A PIG.

Did You Know They Closely Resemble These of a Human Being?

Your eyes are like a pig's. If anybody told you so you would doubtless feel insulted. And yet such a statement would be quite correct. Your eyes are very much like a pig's—more so, indeed, than they are like any other animal's.

This is one of the most curious truths of physiology. A pig's eye so closely resembles that of a human being as to serve a very important practical purpose. Young men who are learning to be eye doctors are taught the rudiments of their business with the help of pigs' eyes. They dissect them and practice all sorts of operations on them, from removing a cataract to the snipping of the muscles which control the movements of the eyes in their orbits. If an oculist happens to be puzzled about an operation he expects to perform, he sometimes gets one or more fresh pigs' eyes from the butcher and makes experiments with them.

A pig's eye in a live pig's head does not look much like a human eye. It is small and not very intelligent in expression. When the pig is dead, however, and the eye is taken out it is hardly distinguishable from the eye of a person.

Human eyes do not vary much in size, and in themselves they have no expression whatever. When it is said that a person has large eyes it means simply that the opening between the lids is larger than ordinary. It is the lids that are wholly responsible for ocular expression, which is capable of such wonderful variations.—New York American.

Clever Scheme.

"There is no use talking, women are foxy."

"What do you mean?"

"Take that wife of mine. She casually asked me what size of gloves I wear."

"I see—as if you couldn't guess that she was going to buy you gloves?"

"That's just the point. She bought slippers the size of my hand."

"Then what did she ask you about the gloves for?"

"So that I wouldn't know she intended to buy slippers."—Detroit Free Press.

Drawing the Line.

Officer—What's the matter with that soup you're turning your nose up at? Private—It's full of sand and grit, sir. Officer—Now, look here, my man, did you come to camp to grubble or to serve your country? Private—Well, I did come to serve my country, sir, but not to eat it.—Boston Transcript.

Not Very Green.

"Odd, isn't it, how human ways are in such direct contradiction to nature?"

"In what, for instance?"

"Did you ever find anything green about a grass widow?"—Baltimore American.

That Sense of Humor.

You occasionally find a man who realizes that he can't sing, but you never saw one that didn't think he had a keen sense of humor.—New Orleans Picayune.

THE BABY DID IT

By EUNICE BLAKE

We live on the brink of ruin all the while without realizing it. I have read often of persons dying of starvation who had been very prominent and upon whom money had flowed like water. I can especially remember actors and actresses who have furnished such examples. But let a person find himself without money and without friends and he realizes the condition he is in. Few there are who keep their heads at such times.

Tom Williams was one of these last named persons. His father died insolvent when he was ready to enter college. Nevertheless Tom went to college. Where he was to get the money from to pay his way he hadn't the faintest idea. His pluck attracted attention and interested others in him. He was full of resource and could invent ways to get out of holes. Often he would not know where a meal was coming from, but after being graduated he could not remember his having gone hungry for any considerable time.

Having finished his college course, he concluded that a trip to Europe was in order. He had taken a prize during his last year, and with this he bought a ticket on a steamer to Naples. He walked over Switzerland and Italy and one day found himself in Genoa ready to go home, but having not a cent with which to pay his passage. A steamer was to sail that afternoon, and Tom strolled aboard of her. Besides the passengers who were booked to go over, there were persons aboard to bid them goodbye. Tom envied every person he saw coming aboard carrying hand baggage.

He was standing on an upper deck on which opened windows of state-rooms. Hearing a baby cry behind him, he turned and saw a woman endeavoring to soothe the child. She was a delicate looking young mother, and the child seemed to trouble her. Tom smiled at the baby, and it stopped crying.

"Let me take your baby," said Tom to the lady. "I'll walk with you to the dock. I'm fond of children."

The lady assented, and Tom, taking the child, left her, sauntering about, letting the child look at the crowds on the dock and otherwise amusing him. He heard the "All ashore that's going," but paid no attention to it. The ship moved out into the bay, and still Tom walked the baby. When the open sea was reached he took the baby back to its mother. The child seemed to be in a very good humor. The mother expressed her gratitude.

"I must go over without a nurse," she said, "and I don't know what I shall do. My nurse left me on the eve of sailing, and I had no time to get another. I am usually seaisick, and a seaisick person is powerless to take care of a baby."

"Madam," replied Tom, "I am at your service. I have been making a pedestrian tour of Europe. I came to Genoa to take a steamer home, but ran out of funds. I came aboard this ship just to see how it would feel to be on a vessel bound for home. I was about to go ashore when I heard your baby cry. When those who were to go ashore were directed to do so I was amusing your child and had not the heart to obey the order. I presume I shall have to work my passage as a steward or, probably worse, as a stoker. I would much rather take a situation with you as nurse."

There was something so amusing in this stalwart fellow, who had played football while in college, strapped on an ocean liner and ready to hire himself to take care of a baby that the lady laughed. But she snapped at the proposition.

"I'll pay your passage and double nurse's wages," she said.

"The passage money will do," Tom replied.

The lady sent for the purser and was fortunate enough to secure a whole stateroom for Tom and the baby when it was necessary that he should have it with him. No sooner had all been arranged than the ship began to roll. The lady became seasick, and if ever there was gratitude to Providence from a woman she experienced it at being relieved of the care of her child.

The passage was a rough one, and Tom kept the baby with him day and night. A few days before reaching the American shore the weather moderated, and the mother went on deck. She was so grateful to Tom for what he had done and appreciative of what he had endured that she paid a stewardess to relieve him occasionally when off duty. This enabled him to sit on deck with his employer, and he learned something about her. She was a well to do widow about Tom's age.

And Tom told her all about himself—how he had got through college, how he had made a tour in Europe and how he now proposed to go to work. She asked him if he were not going to get a profession in the same way, but he said he was tired of running so close to the wind and was going to work.

However, the widow asked him to call upon her after they reached port, and Tom accepted the invitation. He had not known her long before she proposed to furnish him with the means to study law. This offer, of course, Tom rejected with thanks, whereupon the widow told him that she wished him for a husband and preferred that he should be a lawyer.

Tom studied law, making his way while doing so, and married the widow. He now has a large practice.

THE TRAINED GOWN FAVORED WHEN DANCING IS NOT INDULGED IN

In selecting the afternoon and evening gown the first thing to be considered nowadays is its adaptability to dancing; the train, especially in these days of narrow skirts, hampers a dancer considerably, so the chic little frock in round length has become a favorite. There are times, however, when such a frock lacks dignity and a trained gown must be worn; there are some women, too, who prefer a bit of discomfort rather than forego the grace of a long skirt, so they catch the train over the wrist by a loop arranged on the skirt when dancing.

No. 8215 developed in crepe de Chine, and chiffon in soft shades of green is an ideal dinner design and would be suitable for almost any occasion.

WAISTCOAT EFFECTS STILL FAVORED IN AFTERNOON FROCKS

Vests and waistcoats offer an excellent way of introducing a bit of contrast and brightening up a dull frock or suit. These vests are often of the most vivid shades and then again are fashioned of brocades, printed silks or velvets in which there are interminglings of dull reds, blues and golds. No. 8231 is smartly developed in an old blue tussor crepe with the upper part of the bodice and the tunic in striped crepe. The rather tight-fitting waistcoat is a part of the bodice and is made of plain crepe to match the skirt.

These crepes, which promise to be equally as popular as the taffetas, are wide, ranging from 38 to 45 inches, and may be purchased from 75 cents and up. This costume requires for size 36 5/4 yards of 36 inch material.

The small girl's frock is made attractive by the same little touches that are used on the grown up dress and suit. In No. 8239 is shown a drop-shoulder and yoke effect. Flowered crepon is the material, with the tiny revers, cuffs and skirt of black velvet.

For a child of 10 this model requires 2 1/2 yards of 36 inch material.

No. 8231—sizes 34 to 42.

No. 8239—sizes 6 to 14.

Each pattern 15 cents.

PENNSY EMPLOYEES GET BACK PASSES

Rescinds Order Annulling Free Family Transportation.

Philadelphia, Feb. 17.—Here's good news for the officers and employees of the Pennsylvania railroad:

They may again obtain passes for the dependent members of their families. This announcement is contained in a statement to employees by General Manager S. C. Long.

This settles the question for the Pennsylvania, but the employees of the Reading have not yet heard what action that company will take.

The notice of the general manager of the Pennsylvania railroad is as follows:

"By general notice dated Nov. 29, 1913, officers and employees were advised that, under the terms of the public service company law of the state of Pennsylvania, the free transportation between points within that state of members of their families would not be permissible after Jan. 1, 1914, and that the issue of passes covering such transportation after that date would consequently be discontinued."

"The public service commission of the commonwealth of Pennsylvania, by its administrative ruling No. 1, has ruled that the granting by railroad companies of free passes to their officers and employees to be used for the transportation of dependent members of their families would not be regarded by the commission as a violation of the provisions of the public service company law."

"This ruling will be accepted as affording protection against exaction of penalties for the issuance of passes to dependent members of the families of officers and employees, and the general notice of Nov. 29, last, is therefore annulled."

GORE UNDER OATH DENIES CHARGES

Says Accusations Are Political Plot Against Him.

HIS VERSION OF INTERVIEW

Blind Senator Denies Making an Attack on Mrs. Bond and Places Responsibility of Meeting on Her.

Oklahoma City, Okla., Feb. 17.—Political opposition was held responsible by Thomas P. Gore, United States senator from Oklahoma, for the damage suit for $50,000 filed against him by Mrs. Minnie E. Bond, who alleges that the senator attacked her in a Washington hotel.

Senator Gore took the witness stand in his own behalf. He denied making an attack on Mrs. Bond and said he believed the charge to have been made to injure him in his campaign for re-nomination as the Democratic candidate for the senate.

He placed the responsibility for the meeting in Washington on Mrs. Bond herself, and declared that he never had attempted to fondle her. The direct examination was brief, but at its close the senator was subjected to a grilling cross-examination from Mrs. Bond's attorney in an attempt to shake the defendant's testimony.

Gore said his Washington office was in the senatorial annex, and that he had three clerks and a messenger in the office.

"Did Mrs. Bond ever come to your office about her husband's application?" "Yes. About ten days after the inauguration. She came in and asked me if I could not consider her husband's candidacy. I told her that I could do nothing. Then she said: 'Then, Senator, you can't hold out any hope?' I said 'No.'"

"Did you make any advances to her, such as holding her hand or touching her foot?" "Most positively not."

"When did you next hear from Mrs. Bond?" "She called me on the phone a few days later. She asked me if I could come down to her hotel to see her. I told her I could not. She next called me up at my residence Easter morning. She wanted me to come down to see her then. She asked me if I could see her the next day. I told her possibly I could. She called me at my office at 2 o'clock. She again asked me to her hotel. I suggested that she come to my office. She said she was afraid there would be too great a crowd at my office."

"She called me again and asked me to come to her hotel. I told her I could not at that time. Then she called me if I would drop by the hotel on my way home. I said possibly I would. I left my office under the guidance of Howard Kay about 6 o'clock, arriving a few minutes later."

"Mrs. Bond met me in the lobby and said, 'I will take charge of the senator.' She started toward the elevator and I asked her where we were going. She said she would take me to a parlor. After getting on the second floor she said the parlor was too crowded and she would take me to her room. She seated me in a rocking chair."

"What was the first thing she said to you?" "She remarked that she was disappointed at her husband's failure to land the office. I told her I was sorry."

"Then she had a 'phone call and talked for a few minutes more. I told her I would have to be going. I rose and extended my hand. She seized it and pulled. I asked her what she meant. I was off my balance and probably was leaning over Mrs. Bond."

"Then I heard some one come in and I asked who it was. The man answered: 'T. E. Robertson.' Mrs. Bond let out an outcry and Robertson told her to 'Stop that squalling.' Then he went to Mrs. Bond and said: 'What have you to say about this?' She said: 'I did not want Bond to know you were in my room.'"

"Then I turned to Robertson and asked him what this meant. He mumbled something that he did not know anything. I asked Robertson to take me down and he did."

"Did you make any advances to this woman?" "I did not."

"Did Dr. Eppel call on you the next day?" "I think it was the next day."

"What did he say?" "He intimated that other witnesses had seen the affair. He said he would try to get Mrs. Bond out of town. I said it made no difference to me; that I could not understand a man who would send his wife out on an infamous mission like this."

CITY MANAGER PLAN ADVOCATED

Ideal Government For Suburban Towns.

INVOLVES SHORT BALLOT.

What the Plan Is and How It Works. It is the Outgrowth of the Commission Form, but Has Distinctive Features.

The administration of many of our cities is a conspicuous failure, writes Harold J. Howland in Suburban Life. The deplorable fact is no less true of many a suburban town. We have much to learn in this country about municipal government. But we are learning. Fourteen years ago the city of Galveston was devastated by flood. Out of the ruin sprang into being a new experiment in city administration—commission government. As adopted in Galveston it was an emergency measure, but its success was so immediate and so sustained that its permanency was quickly assured. Today there are nearly 300 cities in the United States which have the commission form of government.

A year and a half ago a further development of the commission plan was put into operation in the little city of Sumter, S. C. The plan did not originate there, but in Lockport, N. Y. But the bill which certain progressive citizens of Lockport caused to be introduced into the New York legislature to authorize the adoption by any third class city of the "Lockport plan" never succeeded in making its way through that medieval body.

Indeed, the new plan did not originate in America at all. Like many another valuable invention, it was "made in Germany."

The most successful municipal governments in the world—those of Germany—are all directed by an elective council which hires a professional "magistrat," an experienced executive secretary, whose business it is to carry out the council's orders. The profession of "magistrat" is one of great opportunity and honor. Magistrats who succeed brilliantly in the administration of small cities are called to larger work and higher salaries in bigger cities.

This is the essence of the Lockport-Sumter plan, or, as it is better and more descriptively called, the city manager plan of city government. The advent of the city manager plan is the most promising single event in the history of municipal administration in the United States. Along the road which it points out lies the way toward the elimination of those disgraceful accompaniments of municipal administration—inefficiency, extravagance, local and partisan favoritism, ward politics and graft—which have made the government of cities the "one conspicuous failure of the United States." The plan as it is now in operation will doubtless receive many a modification before it approaches perfection. But it contains in itself the essential elements out of which perfection may reasonably be expected to develop. Nothing but the exact reverse of this can be said of our existing methods of municipal government. We may correct prevalent evils from time to time by the traditional method of "turning the rascals out," but our efforts will in the long run be useless. The fundamental structure is wrong.

What is the city manager plan? It is simply an application to the public corporation—the municipal government—of the form of management common to all private corporations. Under it the administration of the city has two component parts—the commission and the manager. The voters at the polls elect the members of a small commission, in whom are vested the power, the authority and the responsibility. The commission in turn appoints a city manager, an expert administrator, who does the work. To him, of course, the commission delegates whatever of the power and the authority is necessary to enable him to do the work. The manager is responsible to the commission; the commissioners are responsible to the voters.

The commission corresponds to the board of directors of a corporation. The city manager corresponds to the corporation's general manager. The commission determines in broad outline the policy on which the city's affairs shall be run. The manager carries out the policy and runs the affairs. The manager appoints the lesser city officials, he hires the city workers. The city of Sumter, in advertising for applicants for the new position thus described the job:

"The applicant should be competent to oversee public works, such as paving, lighting, water supply, etc."

"An engineer of standing and ability would be preferred."

"The city manager will hold office so long as he gives satisfaction to the commission."

"He will have complete administrative control of the city, subject to the approval of the board of three elected commissioners."

"There will be no politics in the job."

"The work will be purely that of an expert."

"Local citizenship is not necessary."

"The city manager plan has all the advantages of the commission form of government with added advantages of its own—almost worth all the rest."

Mexican Love of Flowers.

There is one unfailing charm about Mexican houses, writes H. Hamilton Fyfe in the Daily Mail. That is the charm of flowers. All Mexicans love flowers. Their homes present to the street bare, unlovely walls, with barred and close curtained windows. Very often, though, you get a glimpse as you pass the open door of a patio where the sunlight flickers on green leaves and vivid blossoms. Always you may count upon such an interior even if you cannot see it.

Have Pretty Hair

Thick, Soft, Fluffy, and no Dandruff—Use Parisian Sage.

If your hair is losing its natural color, coming out and splitting, or looks that enviable softness, gloss and beauty, do not despair—pretty hair is largely a matter of care. If it is too thin make it grow. If it is harsh and brittle soften it up—lubricate it. If you have dandruff it is because the scalp is too dry and flakes off. Freshen up the scalp with Parisian Sage—all dandruff disappears, falling hair and itching head cease, your hair is doubly beautiful.

Parisian Sage, sold by People's Drug Store and at all drug counters, is just what you need—a large bottle costs but 50 cents. It surely makes the hair lustrous and seem twice as abundant. You cannot be disappointed in Parisian Sage.
